The message below was sent via e-mail (from EconCommencement2020 as the sender) on May 21 to all Economics and Business Economics major students on the College’s commencement eligibility list. If you did not receive the message because the e-mail address that you have on your UCLA record is invalid, you will need to officially update your e-mail address via MyUCLA.

Once you update your e-mail address, you will need to contact the College via the Message Center right away to be given access to MarchingOrder, the company that is creating individual slides for the College and Econ graduation celebrations. Instructions for contacting the College via the Message Center can be found at https://college.ucla.edu/commencement. You will also need to contact the College if you want the slide to list your preferred name rather than the name that you are officially listed under.

Please note that the firm deadline to request access and then to go into the MarchingOrder system to personalize your slide is May 30 at 11:59 p.m. So, you should send your request to the College no later than Monday, May 25, if possible.

Dear Students and New Alumni,

The UCLA Department of Economics is pleased to inform you that we will be celebrating your accomplishment of earning a degree from UCLA via our graduation celebration webpage that will go live on the morning of Saturday, June 13. Given that the video of our keynote speaker and videos of other greetings will be pre-recorded, you will be able to access the website after June 13 as well.

To recognize students individually, each student will have a slide with his or her name on it as well as a photo and quote. If you want to include a photo and/or quote, you will need to provide them to MarchingOrder, the company that we are coordinating with, no later than May 30. This is a firm deadline.

You should have already received an e-mail from the College with instructions about creating your slide, as the same slide will be used on the College’s Virtual Commencement website. We have attached a template of the e-mail that was sent out. Note that each student received an individual link for creating his or her slide.

Given that we might send additional communication about this celebration via Econ-Alert, our listserv, rather than via e-mail, please make sure that you have added yourself to the listserv. You can do so by going to https://moodle2.sscnet.ucla.edu/course/view/Econ-Counseling.

If you have additional questions or concerns about our upcoming event, please contact us via the MyUCLA Message Center at https://economics.ucla.edu/undergraduate/contact-us/message-center.

Please also check the Commencement portion of our website periodically for updated information as well. https://economics.ucla.edu/undergraduate/current-students/commencement-2

On behalf of the UCLA Department of Economics – CONGRATULATIONS!
